

WOMEN IN SURGERY

Five billion people lack access to essential surgical care. An additional 2.2 million surgical specialists are needed to address this global challenge.

Mission: Restore recognizes that closing the gender gap in surgery is not only about equality for women, but is the most impactful and effective way to meet the current surgical need.

By recruiting, training and supporting female surgeons across Africa, we can help address the global scarcity of surgeons while improving access to healthcare worldwide. In short, saving millions of lives.

The “Women in Surgery” Campaign will feature Mission: Restore’s remarkable female surgeons from across East Africa and the United States. We will highlight their experience and demonstrate their leadership in the surgical field.

Through this campaign we aim to raise awareness around gender inequality and close the global surgical gap. To further support the training and mentoring of women surgeons in Africa, visit our Generosity campaign.

Let’s support women in surgery and operate together to provide essential surgical care to the children and families who need it most.
